5 things to know, and a new Rancho Cordova restaurant

Aug 1, 2017, 8:15am PDT

Welcome to another month, loyal readers. These headlines are the perfect way to start your August. Here we go.

Rancho Cordova dining scene expands

A new eatery called Poké Cube is in the works at 3161 Zinfandel Drive, in Rancho Cordova's Capital Village center. It will serve poké, the popular entree that generally features diced fish with rice, sauce and toppings.

It will be the first location for Poké Cube, which is expected to open this year, according to its website. An online menu offers a sneak peek of the customizable bowls available at the restaurant. I'm intrigued.

ISTOCK

Diners at Poké Cube in Rancho Cordova will ditch traditional plates for bowls featuring fish and more.

How about pizza and beer?

A pizza shop and a new brewery are among the tenants planned for a building near a high-growth area in midtown Sacramento. The building, at 1900 S St., is about to undergo an adaptive reuse project by owner Potter-Taylor & Co. to change it from entirely office to mostly retail use.

Roseville building gets new owner

Shri Chawla, a Palo Alto-based investor, acquired the Mammoth Professional Building at 300 Harding Blvd. in late July for $5 million. Reporter Ben van der Meer has details on the new owner's plans for the Roseville building.

Some banking news

Longtime Sacramento banker Randy Reynoso is leading a new business banking investor real estate group for Wells Fargo & Co. that will be based in Sacramento. Get the full story from reporter Mark Anderson.

Finally, don't miss these photos

Invited guests attended a July 24 farewell party at Wildwood Kitchen & Bar for Jennifer Granger, the wife of former Sacramento Kings president Chris Granger. Yes, we have a slideshow of the party.

Have a great Tuesday, everyone. Thanks for reading.
